Seymour tells Bay council:

No crawfishing allowed in zoning change issue

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

"Ain't nobody going to crawfish out of it," Bay St. Louis City Council President Wilmer Seymour told the councilmen Thursday to emphasize his pledge regarding an upcoming special meeting for a final decision in the controversial annexed area zoning change request.

Seymour made his emphatic pledge at the end of a council meeting at City Hall after the town leaders agreed to meet at 6 p.m. March 27 to make a final decision whether or not to rezone a portion of Washington Street property near US-90 to allow construction of a new-story apartment complex.

The heirs to the Elsie Chapin Estate want part of that property rezoned from single family residential (R-1) to multi-family residential (R-3) to allow construction of 50 Farmers Home Administration-financed apartments for moderate income families.

"We will discuss one thing, all five of us will be here, we're going to have a vote and we won't have a tie," he told the councilmen regarding the special meeting.

The Thursday night meeting was heated literally due to a breakdown of the City Hall air conditioning system and figuratively by an overflow crowd of some 30 people—many of whom were either vehemently for or against the project.

Seymour's sports referee chairmanship style more than once helped quell digressions by citizens addressing the council and arguments erupting between those with opposite views.

Earlier in the meeting, Councilman Gary Griffin moved and Councilman Shelton Seuzeneau seconded a motion to table action in the zoning change request by the City Planning and Zoning Commission.

Councilman James Thriffiley cast the only opposing vote because he felt the council should not delay its decision.

Griffin said he had not yet formed an opinion regarding the proposals and needed more time for consideration of the matter.

Thriffiley read a petition presented in opposition to the zoning change and added his name as the 63rd signature to the document.

He also read written protests from two property owners who state they own land within a 160-foot radius from the portion of the Elsie Chapin Estate which is subject of the zoning change request.

Ruby Thomas and Paula Triche, both filed the protests which, if they represent at least 20 percent of the property owners within the radius, will require the five-member council to approve the zoning change by at least a 4-1 vote.

The council directed City Clerk Edward Favre to check the validity of the protests and accepted the petition.

County Demo caucuses attended by stalwart few

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT
By mid-afternoon yesterday only 20 of Hancock County's 26 precincts had reported the results of their Democratic caucuses.

Precincts in Arlington, Waveland, West, Dedezier, Diamondhead, Kiln East and Kiln West had not reported their caucus results by about 3 p.m., according to Benvenuti.

Of the precincts reporting, County Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Joseph H. Benvenuti said there were 7.0 votes for Walter Mondale, 6.7 votes for Gary Hart, 4.4 votes for Jesse Jackson, .1 vote for John Glenn and 10.9 uncommitted votes.

Benvenuti said he had given instructions that results be hand-delivered to him at the circuit clerk's office in the county courthouse as soon as the caucuses were over.

The caucuses began at 10 a.m., and persons arriving after 10:30 were prohibited by caucus rules from participating.

Precincts in Arlington, Waveland, West, Dedezier, Diamondhead, Kiln East and Kiln West had not reported their caucus results by about 3 p.m., according to Benvenuti.

Those six precincts have a total of seven votes, one each except for Diamondhead, which has two.

The number of votes allowed each precinct is based on precinct size.

At the caucuses, each candidate's preference group caucused among themselves to elect the individuals to represent them at the county convention.

According to party rules, the number of delegates elected to share each precinct vote is four, and no precinct shall have fewer than one. One delegate is represented by four delegates at the county convention to be held at the Hancock County Courthouse March 3.

Hancock County will have a total of 18 votes at the county convention, or according to procedure 18 delegates.

Benvenuti said the county convention will be held at the Hancock County Courthouse.

Groundbreaking held for naval facility

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A clear warm day marked groundbreaking ceremonies Friday for a $6 million addition to the U.S. Navy Oceanographic Office at the National Space Technology Center in Hancock County.

Key speakers for the event included U.S. Congressman Trent Lott and Commodore John C. Seesholtz, USN, Oceanographer of the Navy.

A welcome was given by Capt. J.M. Sears, USN, commanding officer, Naval Oceanographic Office at NSTL.

The new center was designed by the architectural firm of Cooke, Douglas, Farr, Ltd. of Jackson. The construction contractor is Tilley Constructors and Engineers, Inc. of Gulfport.

The new center will house the Inshore Oceanographic Operations Project, Acoustic Oceanographic Operations Project, Geology, Chemical and Biology Laboratories, and Navy Oceanographic Library.

Completion of the 69,645 square foot building is scheduled for August, 1985.

Commodore Seesholtz stated, "Over its more than 150 years of existence, NAVOCEANO has remained in the forefront of oceanography."

"Our groundbreaking ceremony is testimony to the achievements of NAVOCEANO, testimony to the dedication and the excellence of its people."

"It gives public recognition to the vital importance that our operating forces place upon Naval oceanography," he added.

Lott hailed the Naval Oceanographic Office as a "triumph of science and technology."

Lott was the principal speaker at groundbreaking ceremonies for a new $6 million operations center at the site. The building will house a technical library of oceanographic materials as well as a variety of working projects, including those focusing on anti-submarine warfare, underwater acoustics and amphibious operations.

The Mississippi congressman said the Naval Oceanographic Office, which moved here eight years ago, was a catalyst for renewed interest in the sciences.

"Here, people are at work, exploring the depths, charting the currents and gauging changes in the ocean which may create the needs for changes in business and military tactics," he said.

"It's good to see an example of a federal re-location project that has worked," Lott said.

Hancock flotilla seeking Cutoff-Bay channel

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla No. 33 at Diamondhead is seeking U.S. Army Corps of Engineers approval to dig a Bay of St. Louis channel to allow better access to and from Cutoff Bayou.

Richard T. Alves, flotilla commander, said Monday that the auxiliary would like to dig a five-foot-deep, 40-foot-wide and 800-foot-long channel from the mouth of Cutoff Bayou easterly toward Marker No. Five in the Bay.

Although the proposed channel will not physically link with the Bay waterway, it will be dug far enough to allow relatively deep draft flotilla vessels and pleasure craft docked at the Diamondhead Marina quick access to the Mississippi Sound, Alves reported.

He explained that the flotilla is frequently summoned to support the U.S. Coast Guard in search and rescue missions in the Mississippi Sound.

Alves said the Cutoff Bayou-Bay access channel could save 30 minutes to one hour of travel time for search and rescue vessels heading toward the sound.

He noted the reduced response time means the flotilla's life-saving capabilities would be improved.

"Another reason we are doing this is to benefit all boaters," Alves stated.

He reported the Cutoff access to the Bay can be used during extreme high tides, but under normal conditions in the proposed channel area there is usually only about two or three feet of water depth.

The shallow area frequently requires boaters to travel north along Cutoff to Jourdan River and loop southward toward the Bay.

The entire project is sponsored by the auxiliary and will be funded with donations which have been collected during the last several years from Diamond-head boaters, Alves said.

Alves added he would prefer not to reveal the cost of the privately-funded project at this time.

A Corps Mobile Office spokesman explained the proposed method of digging the channel is by utilizing a barge-mounted dragline to remove approximately 1,970-cubic-yards of silt and sand and spread it uniformly on the waterbottom adjacent to the channel.

Diamondhead Corp. (now named Purcell, Inc.) was issued a Corps permit in 1977 for virtually the same project, but the work was not performed and the permit expired, the spokesman noted.

There were no problems with the 1977 permit, but the Corps is making sure proper state permits are obtained and requests anyone with objections to the project to write the Mobile office, the spokesman said.

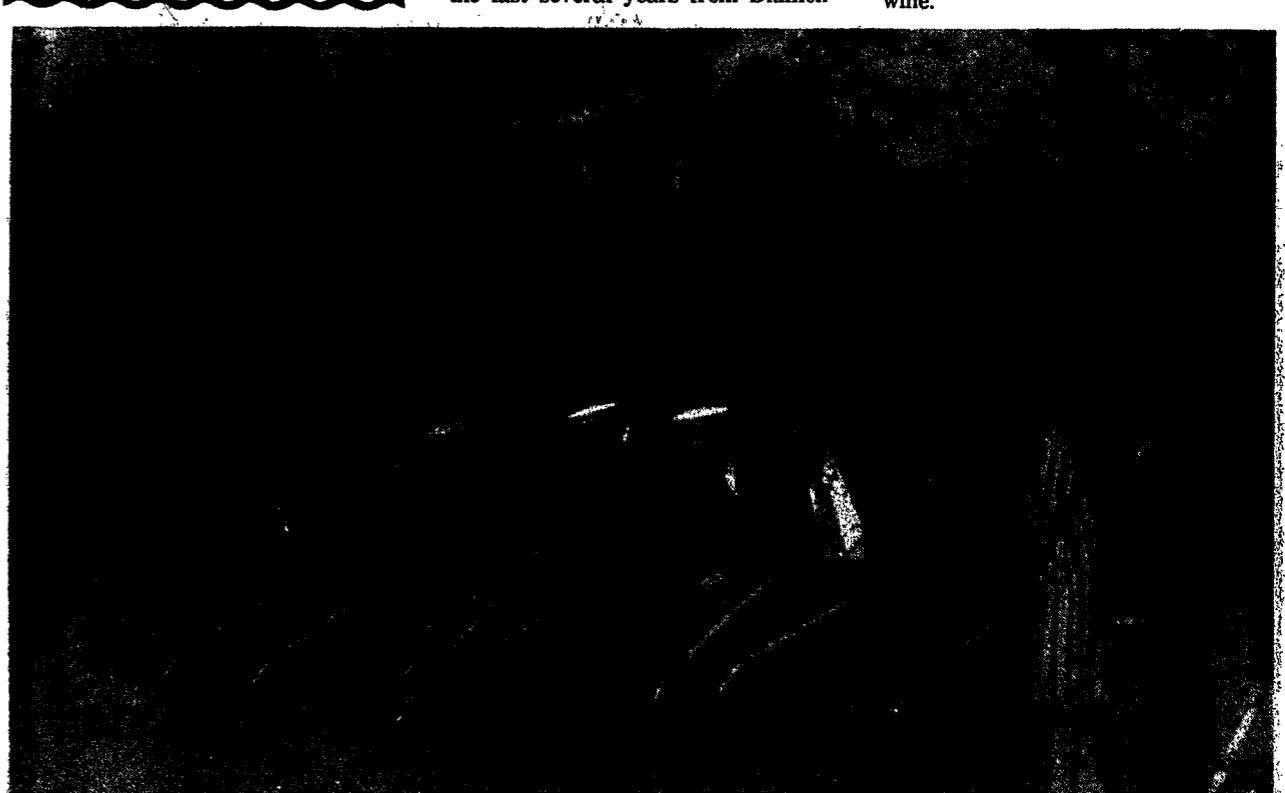

A preliminary assessment indicates the project will not adversely affect the natural environment, endangered CHANNEL—Page 5A

Ladner said the burglary was discovered Wednesday morning when the owner found the front glass door broken.

The burglar, he said, stole approximately one case of Mad Dog 20/20 wine.

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION—An unusual overflow crowd of about 30 people jam the Bay St. Louis City Hall Council Chamber Thursday night regarding a proposed zoning change request to allow apartment construction on Washington Street near US-90. Many of those attending the meeting voiced their opposition or support of the project. City Council President Wilmer Seymour told the city leaders to make a decision at a March 27 special meeting. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Richard Chapin, one of the heirs of Gulfport, said his family was attempting to develop the property to benefit the neighborhood.

Dr. Andrew Martinovich said he felt the proposed apartment complex would bring traffic congestion, government subsidized housing and undesirable people to the area.

William Zimmerman, son-in-law of Ruby Thomas, said her property would be devalued by the complex and urged the council to vote against a zoning change.

He also posed the rhetorical question of why have a zoning ordinance if it can be changed by one person's or firm's request.

Floyd Franks of Hattiesburg, one of the owners of the proposed complex, said he felt the character of the neighborhood had changed to that of a commercial area from the time the area was initially classified R-1.

Robert Heitzmann said he thought the zoning change represented an insult to the annexed area residents who have not yet received regular city services.

Carl Bandert noted that sewage is in the ditches in the annexed area.

Seuzeneau reported the city plans to begin annexed area sewerage installation in October.

Robert Genin of Favre, Genin and Scafide, the law firm representing the Chapin heirs, said only Thomas had a right to complain about the development since she would be next door to it.

Jean Laroux, another Chapin heir, said the $1.5 million complex would pay $1,000 monthly in city and county taxes.

Nell Frisbie, the 'selling' real estate agent for the property, reported when the project was being formulated she was advised by the city that the land was commercially zoned.

Beverly Coggan said the complex would increase traffic and create a dangerous intersection at US-90 and Washington.

Raymond Thomas, son of Ruby Thomas, said the proposed development would ruin the neighborhood and the value of his mother's home.

EDITORIAL

Beautification workshop set for Monday

A very important workshop will be held Monday morning at the library in Bay St. Louis.

The title of the workshop is 'A War on Ugliness' and will be conducted by Dr. Bob T. Chapin, coordinator of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension's Land Use Center at Mississippi State University.

It does not take much looking around in our communities to find many areas where improvements can be made on beautification.

Many of the improvements can be made with very little effort, and this among other things will be discussed in this workshop. Admission is FREE to interested citizens.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. and the workshop will start at 9:30 a.m.

There are so many reasons for interested citizens to attend this workshop co-sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

One big reason is the Annual Spring Pilgrimage for the Mississippi Gulf Coast, which will bring many visitors from throughout the state and nation to our area.

The Pilgrimage at Diamondhead is set for March 30. That is less than two weeks from now, with April 5 as the date for the Bay-Waveland area.

This is an opportunity for the citizens to become more learned on ways of improving the appearances of our county and municipalities.

We are hoping many will attend this workshop.

Quotables by CUEVAS '99

Beautification seems to be our theme this week. On Friday in a conversation with Tom Hill, Bay St. Louis postmaster, we were told his department was going to enforce a regulation of having mail box numbers displayed.

In addition to the correct box numbers (and this regulation goes for any person receiving his mail in a rural mail box, inside and outside city limits), the post office is going to enforce the proper height of mail boxes.

We have noted many mail boxes on posts which are falling down or about to fall down, and boxes which do not even look like mail boxes.

Postal notices are also to be delivered to these persons, according to Hill.

It is very hard in many instances to locate the residence of a person living on a rural route because of a lack of house numbering. The numbering of mail boxes will help in this regard.

Saturday's St. Patrick Parade sponsored by the Waveland Civic Association managed to draw many spectators.

Grand Marshall Ken Wilkinson, Colleen Stacy Carter, Civic Association members and all participants of the annual parade appeared to have had a great time.

It was good to see so many spectators since we have just finished all the Mardi Gras parades.

Thanks to all participants for a nice St. Patrick's Day outing.

It is amazing how nice the weather was for the groundbreaking ceremony of the Naval Oceanographic Office's Oceanographic Operations Center.

The sky was clear and sun was shining brightly, just a wonderful day for a groundbreaking.

Keynote speakers Congressman Trent Lott and Commodore John R. Seesholtz, USN, Oceanographer of the Navy, both commented on how nice the weather was for the $6 million groundbreaking.

The new center will give needed space to the Navy's facilities at NSTL and enable them to better perform their important role in America's defense.

We know Captain J.M. Sears, USN, commanding officer of the Naval Oceanographic Office, was all smiles for the entire celebration.

Oceanography has been an operation of the United States Navy for over 150 years and has developed from simple observations of easily-measured features to highly technical descriptions and predictions of complex ocean phenomena.

We will be looking forward to the completion of the 69,645 square foot center in August 1985.

Lions, Lioness Clubs working to improve crucial eye services in Hancock County

To the Editor:

The Hancock County Lions Club was formed about three years ago. Prior to that time a couple of residents of Hancock County supported the Lions Clubs in Pearl River County.

However, this support did not meet the needs of Hancock County. The Lions were continuously being asked to furnish examinations, glasses, and operations for residents of Hancock County.

It became evident the only way Hancock County residents were to enjoy the resources of the Lions Club would be to form a club in the county.

The Mississippi Lions Clubs maintain a Sight Van which travels the entire state and is available to communities, schools, and organizations which wish to have groups of people screened for sight problems.

If it is ascertained that correction is necessary, and there is a need for financial help, the local Lions Club furnishes the necessary correction whether glasses or an operation or both.

The Sight Van was at the Choctaw Shopping Center last June and screened more than 300 residents of Hancock County. The van will be scheduled for another visit this year.

The Lions Clubs maintain the Mid-South Eye Bank. This is a most crucial service for all residents of Mississippi. The Lions Club Mid-South facility provides free operations for all types of eye correction.

Several people this year have availed themselves of the Mid-South facility.

Cassandra Rae Smith will be going to Memphis this week for an operation for crossed-eyes. This little girl would lose her sight if it were not for this operation and at this time.

Maintaining these facilities and services cost money and the Coast Lions Clubs are in the process of establishing a Mid-South satellite in Gulfport.

This, of course, would make our services readily available to Hancock County.

In order to raise money the Lion and Lioness Clubs of Hancock County are sponsoring the Justin Wilson Show, complete with band at the Hancock County Fairgrounds on Saturday, March 24. There will be two shows, one at 3 p.m. and one at 7 p.m.

We ask the people of Hancock County to support this activity so the Lions can continue to furnish sight saving services for those in need.

Advance sale tickets are $5 each. Admission at the door will be $7.50.

Q: I think I have come up with a new invention which I hope to market. How do I get a patent for it, or find out if one has already been issued?

First of all, you will need time and patience, because securing a patent is not an easy task.

But if you do have a new invention, you can be one of an estimated 70,000 receivers of patents this year alone, and you will add your name to the more than 4.3 million patent owners.

To begin your search, you or your representative will need to travel to the Washington suburb of Arlington, Virginia, to the Patent and Trademark Office at 2021 Jefferson Davis Highway.

Once there, you must make a thorough search through the files in the public search room.

Don't bother calling the office, because they will just tell you to come and look through the 24 million documents yourself.

If your search results in finding no reference to your invention, you may qualify for the patent.

To do so, you must file a patent application with the Patent Office. There is a $150 filing fee.

After the application is received, processed and examined, and if it meets the criteria, the office will issue you a patent. At that point, you must pay a $150 issuance fee.

Then the patent is yours and will be for the next 17 years.

However, to keep exclusive marketing rights to the patent you must pay maintenance fees to the Patent Office: $200 after the first three and one-half years, $400 after seven and one-half years and $600 after 11½ years.

If you don't pay those fees, your patent goes into the public domain, and anyone can copy it.

March of Dimes forms 11-county chapter

The March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation has announced the merger of eleven counties into the Magnolia Chapter. The members of Forrest, George, Greene, Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, Jones, Lamar, Pearl River, Perry and Stone represent a combined population of more than 500,000. The chapter will continue the volunteer health agency's fight to prevent birth defects.

The March of Dimes' objective is to prevent the nation's most serious child health problem—birth defects—which strike more than 3,000 infants each year. Over 1,000 children are born in Mississippi each year suffering from birth defects.

The new chapter was created in an effort to increase awareness of birth defects and to increase the March of Dimes' efforts to prevent them.

public and professional health education programs, medical and research grants.

Within the eleven county area, a number of such programs and medical equipment grants have been made possible through funding from the March of Dimes.

Additionally, a limited number of birth defect patients are assisted each year. These funds are given through the March of Dimes' national fund raising campaign.

The Magnolia Chapter Office is located at 100 Main Street, P.O. Box 100, Kosciusko, MS 39090. For more information, call 662-232-2222.

Matters of Health

Children and Hospitalization

EDITOR'S NOTE: This feature is presented in commemoration of Children and Hospitals Week, March 18-24, a national event sponsored by the Association for the Care of Children's Health. Its purpose is to help children, parents, teachers and health professionals deal successfully with the trauma of a child's hospitalization.

Q—My child has to have tonsils taken out. What should I tell him about having an operation and going into the hospital?

A—No one looks forward to having something done to him that might hurt, and the sheer unfamiliarity of being in a place full of unusual machines, smells and people can cause emotional distress for adults as well as kids.

But the critical difference is that adults can convince themselves that going through something unpleasant is necessary to their overall well-being.

Young children do not yet have the experience or thinking ability to understand this, so they feel terrified. This terror can be eliminated, though a child may still have some fears.

Here are a few points to guide you in preparing your child for a hospital stay:

1. Never lie to your child about a hospital visit or surprise him. You may think this saves him worry, but the stress and fear he suffers when he learns the truth makes his ordeal much more frightening and painful than if he had received an explanation.

2. Explain why a trip to the hospital is needed. Tell him that he needs to go because without the hospital's help he could get very sick. Tell him that you love him and don't want this to happen.

3. Try to take your child to the hospital when nothing painful will take place. This helps ease his fear of the unknown.

4. Explain what kinds of things will happen to him. For example, if he's going to have an operation, tell him that he will be given a shot, then taken to another room and asked to breathe something that'll make him sleepy.

Your pediatrician will help you explain. Keep the explanation simple and present it in a positive tone. Make the occasion sound more like an adventure than something to be feared.

5. Don't tell a child something won't hurt at all if it will. You can admit that something might not be a lot of fun without dwelling on the negative aspects of it.

Express confidence that your child will be able to handle the situation well and that any discomfort won't last long. Tell him how you have handled similar situations yourself.

6. Teach your child fear-reducing steps. Children who follow these steps not only feel more relaxed, but also experience less physical discomfort even during painful procedures. Here's what to say:

"Don't think about what you're afraid of. Instead, imagine that you're doing something fun, or that you're someplace you like. Think about happy things, like being at a ballgame or the zoo."

"Stay calm by breathing slowly and deeply. This helps you relax."

"Think of how someone you like—someone who's older and braver—would act in that situation. Imagine that you're that person and do the best you can to act just the way you think that person would."

"Silently tell yourself, be calm, just relax, this won't last long, I'm a big boy (or girl). If you tell yourself not to be afraid, it feels better than worrying."

Help your child actually practice these tips before the dreaded situation. Pick a quiet time to sit down with him and explain each of these techniques. Tell him that they will help him feel less afraid.

Encourage your child to show you how he will use these techniques. Have him demonstrate how he will breathe. Ask him to tell you out loud what he'll be saying to himself to feel less afraid. Get him to tell you who the brave person is that he'll try to be like and how he'll act.

Remind him again to use these tips just before the hospital visit takes place. Afterward, be sure to discuss with him how the techniques helped.

7. Consider the possibility of rooming-in arrangements to that you can spend more time with your child.

While hospitals have visiting hours, many doctors recognize that children need more reassuring contact with their parents than short visiting hours allow.

If your youngster is extremely fearful, it'll be comforting if you spend as much time with him as possible. It'll also make you feel better.

If this arrangement is possible for you, discuss with your physician whether you can spend up to the entire day and evening with your child during his stay.

Some hospitals have rooming-in plans in which parents can share a hospital room with their children.

If your child's hospitalization will be reasonably brief, if you would feel better rooming-in with him, and if your child's fears would be lessened by your presence, ask your doctor if it can be arranged.

With the right planning and preparation before a hospital stay, many sources of fear for children can be reduced. Ask your pediatrician for more advice to help your child deal with his fears.

Emergency number not operative for some Hancock residents

By NAN PATTON EHREBRIGHT

Although the Mississippi Gulf Coast telephone book lists a 911 emergency number for the Delisle Volunteer Fire Department and two local officials say the number worked in the past, South Central Bell's District Manager Don Roberts says 911 has never been operative in the 255 exchange area.

For areas in which the emergency number is operative, dialing 911 is a method for reaching fire department, law enforcement officials and medical assistance in an emergency.

Both John Basko, fireman for the Delisle Volunteer Fire Department, and Ed Friloux, administrator for the Diamondhead Fire Department, say the 911 number was operative in the 255 exchange area until recently.

"I don't know who the calls went to," Basko said, "and I don't know how long it's not been working, but at least a month."

"We lost three structures to fire because of failure of the 911 number," he said.

Basko said he's been trying for two weeks to find out what has happened, without success.

The phone company, he said, told him the number has never been operative.

The calls were answered by the Pass Christian Police Department, according to Friloux.

Friloux said a Diamondhead emergency number has been offered for 911 emergencies in the 255 exchange area, but the phone company would charge about $100 a month for the service, "and that's not in our budget."

Roberts said Friday it's uncertain at this point exactly how that information appeared in the phone book.

"I don't know if it's an error or someone on our part or if someone was contacted at the time the directory was put together and there was a miscommunication."

Roberts said the telephone company "equips an office" to provide 911 service at no charge.

"But the key ingredient is a central answering point for everyone in that wire center area," he explained.

There is no central answering point for the Hancock County 255 exchange, he said, because of varying governmental jurisdictions.

The situation is complicated, he said, by the fact there are a number of volunteer fire departments in the area. Roberts noted there is also no 911 emergency number in operation for persons with a 533 exchange (Pearlenton).

"We urge our customers to post their appropriate emergency telephone numbers somewhere near their telephones so they will be readily available," he said.

Diamondhead residents may call 255-1313 for emergency fire or ambulance service, and Friloux said emergency calls from Kiln, Fenton and Leetown residents will also be dispatched to their proper locations.

Other Hancock County residents should post near their phones the telephone number of the fire department serving their area.

Residents outside municipal corporate limits should call the appropriate sheriff's office for law enforcement assistance, and emergency medical assistance may be obtained by calling Mobile-Medic Ambulance Service at 666-1122.

There is no long-distance charge for calling Mobile-Medic direct, according to the Mobile-Medic dispatcher.

species or historic sites, the spokesman reported.

In addition, the dredged material will be placed based on U.S. Environmental Protection Agency guidelines, the spokesman said.

Written comments to the Corps regarding the proposed work must be received before April 12; referenced to Public Notice No. MS84-00032-H; and directed to the District Engineer, U.S. Army Engineer District, Mobile, P.O. Box 2282, Mobile, Ala. 36628, Attention: Regulatory Branch.

Anyone with questions regarding the project should call Iris Way at the Corps office by telephoning 205-694-3775 and refer to the public notice number.

Markel adds product line

Trus Joist Corporation, manufacturer of lightweight roof and floor structural systems, has added a Waveland dealer to its national residential distribution network.

Joining more than 500 stocking dealers nationwide is Markel Industries on US-90.

Markel Industries will stock 9 1/2 and 11 7/8" residential TJI joists, as well as 9 1/2", 11 7/8", 11-7/8" and 14 1/4" Micro-Lam headers and beams.

Trus Joist's labor-efficient residential TJI floor joist is an alternative to conventional grades of solid sawn joists.

The TJI joist's longer lengths, engineered strength and ease of handling have made it one of the nation's most popular framing components, according to Terry Market.

Available in lengths to 56 feet, it has been designed by Trus Joist engineers to permit up to 24' o.c. spacing, for added time and material savings.

Also available in exceptionally long, continuous span, the company's Micro-Lam laminated veneer lumber headers and beams provide a labor-saving alternative to solid sawn timbers and beams, he added.

Trus Joist products are shipped factory direct to participating stocking dealers. Trus Joist Corporation is headquartered in Boise, Idaho.

Roberts said Friday it's uncertain at this point exactly how that information appeared in the phone book.

"I don't know if it's an error or someone on our part or if someone was contacted at the time the directory was put together and there was a miscommunication."

Scripture sources research presented to St. Monica Guild

By JOE PILET, Publicist
St. Monica Guild

A research paper on sources of the scripture prepared by Mrs. Theo T. Moore was presented to members of St. Monica Guild, Women of Trinity Church in Pass Christian on Monday when the group met in the East Second Street home of Mrs. Claibourne Rick.

"Heaven and earth will pass away; my word will never pass away," Mrs. Moore quoted from Prophetic and warnings found in the Biblical book of Matthew.

Sources of scripture included the writings of Moses, five books known by the Jews as "The Torah" were originally recorded on scrolls, Mrs. Moore said. She explained the use of vellum, a fine kind of parchment prepared from calf skins and used as a writing paper. Mrs. Moore remarked that the progress of civilization might be marked by the variety of materials used to record the Bible, up to the present use of tape recordings.

She touched lightly on language translations mentioning Hebrew, Greek, Latin, English and eventually languages of the world. "Constantly new versions of the Bible are coming out," Mrs. Moore said.

In her research Mrs. Moore said she found only one instance when Jesus Christ read from the scripture. "It was customary when meeting in the synagogue for a scroll to be passed among those in attendance when each took a turn in reading," she said.

The translation of the Bible known as the Latin Vulgate gave the common people access to the scriptures, Mrs.

Moore explained. The Vulgate Bible, translated by St. Jerome in the fourth century served as an authorized version for the Roman Catholic Church. It was commonly accepted and popular.

At the refreshment center Mme. de Randolph Buck, Mrs. Leslie Darden, and Mrs. Eugene Blondeau assisted the hostess in serving. Centering the tea table was a delicate arrangement of white hyacinth and flowering begonia. The guild members will meet April 9 in the home of Mrs. H.M. Minnie which is located on West Beach Blvd. in Pass Christian.

Hunter is the best sauce,"—so goes an old Irish saying, and with St. Patrick's Day approaching, I found myself hungry for delicacies but for a slice or so of that traditional tea time fare of the Irish, not only on St. Patrick's Day but all through the year. Irish Soda Bread.

It's one of my favorite matriarchies, Irish Soda Bread, for both my grandmothers, of Irish descent, prided themselves on their soda bread as an important and delicious standby of the afternoon tea fare.

But there these matriarchs parted company. Grandmother Barrett would have nothing but what she called the "real" Irish Soda Bread on her table, while Grandmother Daly preferred the sweeter version, with raisins and sugar added. So, here they both are, and take your choice.

IRISH SODA BREAD

1 Tbsp. butter or margarine
4 cups flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1 cup buttermilk (or 1 cup sweet milk if you must)
Dash of salt

Rub the butter into the flour, then add the soda and salt, and mix it all together with your fingers. That's the easiest way, believe me. Add the milk and stir into a soft dough, using a wooden spoon. Dust your hands well with flour and set aside for a bit.

Mix the dry ingredients together in a large bowl, tossing it all together with two forks for a minute or so, then add the buttermilk mixture and mix until it all goes together.

Pour or spoon into the pan, and bake for 50 minutes. Let the loaf rest in the pan for a couple of minutes before you turn it onto a wire rack to cool.

Death rates from rheumatic heart disease have declined nearly 76 percent since 1950, according to an American Heart Association estimate. In 1950, more than 22,000 Americans died of rheumatic heart disease. Today, rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease kill about 7,700 people each year, according to American Heart Association statistics.

Methodist Sunday school movement spreads in early 19th Century

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the third in a series of articles by Katrina (Mrs. C. C. Sr.) McDonald of Bay St. Louis, member of the Main Street United Methodist Church here, on the founding and development of Methodism in America in conjunction with the national celebration of the Bicentennial of Methodism in America.

By MRS. KATRINA
McDONALD

The earlier years of the 19th Century were marked by the spread of the Sunday school movement in America. By 1835 Sunday schools were encouraged in every place where they could be started and maintained.

Methodists formed a Sunday school union to promote the extension of these schools for the religious training of the young and moved to guarantee suitable literature for them. The Sunday school became a principal source of prospective members for the church.

The church's interest in education reached beyond the Sunday school as it instituted secondary schools and colleges.

Among the colleges begun by Methodists were Randolph-Macon College in Virginia (1830) and Wesleyan University in Connecticut (1831). The United Brethren began Oberlin University in Ohio (1847) and the Evangelical Association opened Albright Seminary in Pennsylvania (1852). Courses of study for the preachers were also recommended in all three churches by 1845.

A serious concern to supply their preachers, members and Sunday schools with Christian literature motivated the churches to become involved with publishing.

The Methodist Book Concern, organized in 1789, was the first church publishing house in America. By 1816 the Evangelical Association was operating its own publishing equipment. The United Brethren authorized a Printing Establishment in 1831.

From the presses of these printing operations came a succession of hymnals, disciplines, newspapers, magazines, Sunday school materials and other Christian literature to nurture the membership. Profits were usually designated for the support and welfare of retired and indigent preachers and their families.

The churches were also increasingly committed to missionary work. By 1841 each of them had started denominational missionary societies. The first of these was The Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church authorized by the General Conference of 1820. Its purpose was to interpret the importance of missions and to raise funds for missionary endeavors.

The years following the death of Francis Asbury, one of the pioneers of the church, were not without serious problems, especially for the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Richard Allen (1760-1831), an emancipated slave and Methodist preacher who had been mistreated because of his race, left the church and organized the African Methodist Episcopal Church. For similar reasons, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church was begun in 1821.

In 1830 another rupture occurred. About 5,000 preachers and lay people left the church because it would not grant representation to the laity or permit the election of presiding elders (district superintendents).

The new church was called the Methodist Protestant and it remained strong until 1839 when it united with the Methodist Church.

From 1844-65 the big issues confronting the churches were the slavery question and the Civil War. John Wesley had been an ardent opponent of slavery. In 1774 he published a very powerful tract against it, titled 'Thoughts Upon Slavery.'

Many of the leaders of early Methodism such as Thomas Coke and Asbury shared his hatred for this form of human bondage. As the 19th Century progressed, it became evident that tensions were deepening in Methodism and the nation as a whole over the slavery question. Membership was not limited to a region, class or race, and the internal conflicts which grew, ultimately split Methodism into separate northern and southern churches.

The slavery issue was successfully put aside at the Methodist Episcopal General Conference of 1836 and 1840, but it could not be evaded when the 1844 General Conference convened in New York City.

The first skirmish concerned an appeal from Francis Harding of Baltimore who had been suspended for his failure to free slaves acquired by marriage. The appeal lost by a sizeable margin.

The second clash was more serious. It focused on Bishop Jas. O. Andrew, one of the five bishops of the church, who had likewise acquired slaves in a bequest from his first wife, and in his subsequent second marriage.

When the vote was finally taken, after wittering verbal warfare, Andrew was suspended from exercising his Episcopal powers so long as he could not or would not free his slaves.

A few days after the crucial vote, a 'Plan of Separation' was drafted which permitted the annual conferences in slaveholding states to separate from the Methodist Episcopal Church in order to organize their own ecclesiastical structure.

The plan was adopted and groundwork prepared for the creation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Delegates met in Louisville, Ky. in 1845 to organize and their first General Conference met in Petersburg, Va. the following year. Here a discipline and hymnbook were adopted.

Bitterness between northern and southern Methodists expanded in the years leading to Abraham Lincoln's election in 1860 and then through the carnage of the Civil War.

Each church claimed for its region, divine sanction and prayed fervently for God's will to be accomplished and victory for its side.

THREE LITTLE STOOGES—Curly, Larry and Moana are the names of these three playful and comical little puppies now at the Hancock County Animal Shelter on Gulfside Drive in Waveland. The pups are about five weeks old and are an apparent mixture of German shepherd and husky. They were turned into the shelter by their owner who could no longer keep them. One of the little ones is female. However, the shelter is overcrowded with pups right now and these little guys will have to be painlessly destroyed by lethal injection unless good homes with fenced yards are found soon. For adoption information please telephone the Bay-Waveland Humane Society volunteer at 467-0230 Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Thursday from noon until 3 p.m.; or Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Ole Miss confab to probe various journalism careers

Journalism Week is set for March 21-23 at the University of Mississippi, offering a large cast of speakers making presentations and discussing career goals with both college and high school journalism students.

Two days of sessions geared to various career opportunities will be followed by the 38th annual institute of the Mississippi Scholastic Press Association on Friday, March 23.

Wednesday's opening session at 2 p.m. will feature Ole Miss graduates discussing their first jobs. They include Allison Brown with the Pillsbury Corp. in Houston, Tex.; Patti Patterson with the Longview (Tex.) Morning Journal; Rex Baker of WTV-TV in Tupelo; Melanie Mathis of WCPC radio in Houston, Mass.; and Nancy Finerty of the Greenwood Commonwealth.

Opportunities in southern newspapers will be discussed by Reed Sarratt, executive director of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association.

Broadcast journalism opportunities will be the topic of Ernie Schultz, executive director of the Radio and Television News Directors Association.

Thursday panels will consider various media. Newspapers will be covered by Sarratt, W.C. Shoemaker and the Kosciusko Star Herald; Jesse Phillips of the Oxford Eagle, and Gale Denley, president of the Mississippi Press Association and director of student media at Ole Miss, presiding.

Television news will be discussed by a panel now being formed, and moderated by Ole Miss broadcasting instructor Ed Welch.

Public relations opportunities will be the topic of Leo Armati, vice president and director of public relations for the Meredith Corp.; Ann Wilson, representing Holiday Inns; Becky Jones West of the City of Memphis Hospital; and Jim Cleveland, director of public information at Ole Miss, presiding.

The violent and controversial 'Shannon Street Shootout' in Memphis will be analyzed by a panel including Jack Moore, news director of WHBQ-TV; Janet Morris of WMC-TV; Chris Schmidt, news director of WREG-TV; and Ernie Schultz, moderator.

Service journalism will be discussed by James A. Autry, an Ole Miss alumnus who is senior vice president of the Meredith Corp., which publishes such magazines as Better Homes and Gardens, as well as Meredith Vice President Leo Armati and Community Relations Director Ken McDonald.

Autry will also preside at a discussion of magazine opportunities.

A photography workshop will feature Mark Lyons, photographer with The Clarion Ledger of Jackson.

Opportunities in advertising will be discussed by John Malmo, president of Malmo Advertising in Memphis; Bill Miles, president of Miles and Associates of Tupelo; and Joe Neal, advertising manager with The Clarion Ledger-Jackson Daily News, moderating.

Weekly newspaper opportunities will be covered by Carolyn Dillon, editor of the Tylertown Times; Sid Salter, editor of the Scott County Times; Jim Abbott, editor of the Enterprise-Tocsin in Indianola; and Wayne Weidie, editor of the Ocean Springs Record.

Other workshops will be on selling broadcast time, with Frank Hammond of WHBQ-TV of Memphis, and broadcast engineering, with Jim Raines of WHBQ.

An awards ceremony on Thursday evening will honor Ole Miss student journalists for their best efforts of the preceding year. Dr. Will Norton, chairman of the journalism department, will preside, along with Charles Overby, executive editor; and Bob Gordon, editorial director, of The Clarion Ledger; and Jim Pratt, associate professor of journalism.

Friday's institute of the Mississippi Scholastic Press Association will attract hundreds of newspaper and yearbook staff members and advisors from high schools and junior colleges throughout the Mid-South.

Outstanding journalists will lead discussions on photography, newspaper layout, libel, television reporting, sportswriting, feature writing, television production, advertising, news reporting, broadcasting and public relations. The Silver Em Award will be presented to an outstanding journalist with a Mississippi background.
